AIR MASSES AND FRONTS GUIDED STUDY PDF - Search results, In-Class Assignment for Monday Dec. 3 Last week we began learning about air masses and fronts. Today we will go further in exploring these topics., In meteorology, an air mass is a volume of air defined by its temperature and water vapor content. Air masses cover many hundreds or thousands of square miles, and adapt to the characteristics of the surface below them. They are classified according to latitude and their continental or maritime source regions., A weather front is a boundary separating two masses of air of different densities, and is the principal cause of meteorological phenomena outside the tropics. In surface weather analyses, fronts are depicted using various colored triangles and half-circles, depending on the type of front. The air masses separated by a front usually differ in temperature and humidity.,

FRONTS. As air masses move out of their source regions, they come in contact with other air masses of different properties. The zone between two different air masses is a
