Border collies are high-maintenance canines. Not in the grooming department -- they don't care about appearances. They're high maintenance because they possess a work ethic like no other dog. If your border collie doesn't have a meaningful outlet for all that energy, not-so-hilarious hijinks ensue.

Having excluded these mutations, we suggest that this PRA segregating in Border Collie is a new XLPR (XLPR3) and propose it as a potential model for the homologous human disease, X-Linked Retinitis Pigmentosa. Several forms of progressive retinal atrophy (PRA) segregate in more than 100 breeds of dog with each PRA segregating in one or a few breeds. This breed specificity may be accounted ...
